The Independent Reading Level Assessment (IRLA)/Estructura para la Evaluación del nivel independiente de lectura (ENIL) is a K-12 unified standards-based framework for student assessment, text leveling and curriculum and instruction in English and Spanish. It includes every Common Core State Standard for Reading, both in literature and informational text, as well as those Language standards key to reading success. The IRLA (and the ENIL) is American Reading Company's proprietary leveling system and is trademark and copyright protected. It is the only hand-leveled, standards-based system providing rigor, cohesion and accountability that is built on the Common Core State Standards. The IRLA/ENIL, along with its supporting custom designed text sets, exemplar packets and hand-leveled book collections (English and Spanish) can only be purchased through American Reading Company.

Program materials (English and Spanish) include skills cards, folders, training materials, hand-leveled book collections, custom designed text sets and exemplar packets, Research Labs and Thematic Leveled Text Sets on our proprietary leveling system and any other items deemed program materials by American Reading Company. Professional development products (English and Spanish) include introductory training sessions, site licenses, CCSS Leadership Institutes and any other training workshops.

American Reading Company's custom designed text sets, exemplar packets and customized bulk packs are developed after extensive proprietary collaboration with district leaders of curriculum and instruction. The contractual arrangements and permissions for use of copyrighted materials are negotiated and secured by ARC on behalf of the district with the publishers, authors and all other content owners.

All of the above items can only be purchased through and with the permission of the company. Program materials are copyrighted by American Reading Company and may not be duplicated without prior written consent of American Reading Company.
